His nose was red as a danger light,
And his eyes were sunken and dim;
He called for rain and at once it rained
The thunder rolled to the horizon.
But the bookseller drew the timber back,
As he glanced the customer over,
Ad said, "My friend, you have made a mistake;
We don't keep a wholesale store."

A Lesson in Slimming.

Mrs. St. Claire—Horror! horror! This is too awful for anything. My poor girl! How do you manage to live!

Poor girl—I don't live. I am nearly starved, and am faint from the bad air.

"Can't you work?"

"I can't get work. Please give me a crust. I have had nothing but a bone since yesterday."

"Goodness gracious! but this is terrible. I will help you at once."

"Oh, thanks, thanks. I would gladly be your slave."

"No need of that my poor child. My sister who lives in the country, wants a girl. With her you will have a nice home, the best of board, $2 a week, and three afternoons off. Come with me!"

"Oh! I could not think of going to the country."

Rothchild on Silver.

The simultaneous employment of the two precious metals is satisfactory and gives rise to no complaint. Whether gold or silver dominates for the time being, it is always true that the two metals concur together in forming the monetary circulation of the world, and it is the general mass of the two metals combined which serves as the measure of the value of things. The suppression of silver would amount to a veritable destruction of values without any compensation. —B. von Rothchild.
